Win the deals that matter

Your "cheat sheet" for smarter qualification

For every unqualified opportunity your team works, there's a qualified opportunity they're not working.

You need to help your team focus on the deals that matter—by identifying the prospects that represent higher deal sizes and/or faster closes. Your ability to properly and promptly size up sales opportunities puts you in the strongest possible position to outperform your competitors, acquire more and better customers, and accelerate your sales cycles.

A rigorous, thoughtful, repeatable sales qualification process provides the backbone for consistent focus and value for you, your sales team and your customers. Use this cheat sheet as a guide to ensure your team focuses on the deals that matter most.

What Is Sales Qualification All About?

It's About Listening

At its essence, a solid sales qualification process consists of a series of carefully designed questions.

The key is to listen carefully to the answers to determine whether a deal is worth pursuing.

It's About Insight

An effective qualification process gives you a clear overview of all of your opportunities vs. sales goals, and greater visibility into each potential deal. That puts you in a stronger position for making better decisions.

It's About an Ongoing Process

Sales qualification is not a one-time event: "Is this deal qualified or not?"

Qualification should be a continuous process of discovery and validation—throughout the entire opportunity.

It's About Saying No

It can appear counterintuitive, but eliminating opportunities is a savvy strategy.
When you thoroughly understand your target market, you can ask the right questions and determine if the potential opportunity is tightly aligned with your sweet spot criteria. If it's not, walk away.

"Within a quarter of implementing Opportunity Manager, we are seeing a dramatic increase in new highly-qualified opportunities.

And we believe we will see a significant increase in our win rate."
